

GPI POLICY - : Disposal of Surplus Government Property

Rationale

To ensure a standard and fair system exists for the disposal of surplus government property

Policy Objectives

To ensure a standard and fair system exists for the disposal of surplus government property

Activities:

Government property may become surplus to requirements for a number of reasons. The following list provides some examples of how property may become surplus. The list is by no means intended to be comprehensive.

- a) Property that is damaged.
- b) Property that is worn out.
- c) Property surplus to needs.
- d) Property removed during renovations.
- e) Property that has become obsolete.

Once any property has been recognised as surplus to a division's needs the following procedure is to be followed.

Procedure:

- 1) If surplus property has no perceived value as either useful for other divisions or that it holds no monetary value if it were to be tendered/actioned then it is to be disposed of into the Government tip. Before items are taken to the tip a public announcement can be made allowing community members to come and remove these items.
- 2) If surplus property can be utilized by another division, this property should be transferred to the relevant department.
- 3) If surplus property can not be utilized by another division, but it is felt that the property holds a monetary value if it were to be tendered/auctioned within the community the following action is to be taken:

A decision is to be made whether to tender or auction the property
